Accepting New & Established Patients

Parul M. Desai, MD
Cardiology

"In choosing a career, I found that medicine allowed me to apply science to help and change the lives of patients. Cardiology transfixed me early: the physiology of the heart, the physical exam, the breadth and depth of the disease, and the many tools to actually make a long-term difference."

Regina A. Koshy, MD
Cardiology

"I wanted to pursue medicine because the profession studies and applies what is universal to all people – science and humanity. Because a person's health can play a critical role in the making of a person's life story, I want to know both of my patients' stories – their health, and their life."

Jessica L. Darnutzer, MSN, APRN, FNP-C
Cardiology

"Being a nurse is a heritable trait in my family going back to my great-grandmother in the 1920s. I began my career working as a nurse's aide at age 19, which confirmed to me that the bedside is where I belong. It is an incredible honor and privilege to work with people during times of uncertainty in their lives."

Maria E. Chiejina, MD
Gastroenterology

"My desire to pursue a career in gastroenterology was driven mostly by values instilled in me by my faith and family, especially my physician father. Thus, being a physician is a true calling and privilege for me. Gastroenterology provides a fascinating blend of being an intellectual physician and having endoscopic technical skills."

Neema M. Saraiya, MD
Gastroenterology

"I chose a career in gastroenterology because there is no other job quite as exciting! My profession is intellectually stimulating and requires constantly keeping up with the latest advancements and recommendations. GI covers a huge range of disorders that affect people's day to day lives and I feel privileged to help."

Melissa P. Sauls, APRN, FNP-C
Gastroenterology

"I have had a passion for medicine and science as long as I can remember, beginning when I volunteered at a children's hospital while in high school. I chose to be a nurse practitioner for its unique ability to combine medicine with the art of caring for people. I have found a love for caring and providing a path to wellness for those experiencing gastrointestinal ailments"
