Daniel T. Coelho, MD

Pediatrics

"I chose medicine because it was a challenge. Being an immigrant, I did not want to take my parents' hard work for granted. I've always loved working and being around people, and Pediatrics has allowed me to be an advocate and a healer. I believe that every person in my exam room has a voice, and I try to make sure that the parents and children have all their concerns addressed before leaving the room."

Melinda M. Holliday, MD, FAAP

Pediatrics

"I chose a career in medicine and specifically pediatrics because I believe education and prevention are key to optimal health. I have a specific passion for adolescent medicine, and I really enjoy developing long-term relationships with my patients and their parents based on mutual respect and trust. It is so much fun to watch my patients grow up, and it is my honor to play a role in their physical and emotional development."

Emmy J. Galvan, APRN, MSN, FNP-C

Family Medicine

"I have wanted to be a nurse since I was in a health science class in high school. I felt that a career as a family nurse practitioner would give me a good work-life balance while also making a difference in people's lives. I love family practice because I am able to care for all ages, and every day holds something new. I believe in helping patients have quality of life by educating them on the importance of preventive care."

Damian G. Lara, MD

Family Medicine

"Studying sociology as an undergraduate opened my eyes to the many inequities of life, including the lack of quality primary care for many Americans. So when I began medical school it was with the intention of becoming a Family physician and providing that care to anyone. The family doctor holds a unique place in the lives of their community, and hopefully, makes those lives better."

Matthew A. Dwyer, DO

Rheumatology

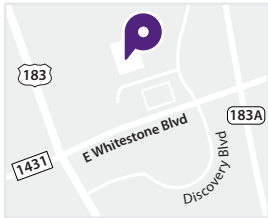

"Helping them improve their lives and empowering them with knowledge can really change their lives. Patient education is my top priority. Patients should understand why something is happening and what we will do together as a patient-doctor team to fix it. We have a conversation together about the disease or condition and what we will do to help give them their life back, and the patient now feels in control and empowered again about their future. And that makes it all worth it."
